FAIR, THE ARCH DEMONETIZER.

On Saturday last the Holmes mine at Candelaria was closed because of the rainous dissection on silver. During the past year scores of good mining properties have been compelled to succumb to the light made upon the industries of the West by the gold rush of New York and Europe aided and abetted by the Democratic President of the United States.

Tracing back the history of silver demonetization to its fountain head, we find that Senator James G. Fair was the original arch demonetizer who gave the demonetizers their first ammunition and pointed ruin and financial disaster all over the West.

When the Big Bonanza was struck in Virginia City, Fair, against the protest of his associates in business, hired Phillip Didesheimer, a mining expert, and that no less than a tool, Linderman, Director of the Mints and the two made an exhaustive report upon the extent of the big bonanza. The report was instigated by Fair and helped him float a gigantic stock scheme. That report made out and signed by Fair's co-conspirators represented so vast a mountain of wealth that the financial world paused in astonishment to contemplate the figures. After reading this report an old Comstock miner remarked: "Let's sell out our claims for in six months silver will be cheaper'n tin." The prediction of the miner caused a laugh, but if silver keeps declining it will in time verify the truth of his jocular utterance.

The San Francisco Chronicle published an exaggerated map of this bonanza silver deposit and it was copied into the New York papers. The report reached Germany and the German government becoming alarmed at the prospective cheapness of silver hastened to demonetize its silver coins. Immediately the gold ring which includes the heavy bondholders took advantage of the situation and all over the world a war was proclaimed against silver. Even the United States fell a victim to the wiles and moneyed influence of this grasping ring and a demonetizing clause was sneaked through Congress.

Now it is claimed that Fair did not force the result of the Didesheimer-Linderman report. Let us see how his subsequent actions tally with this theory. He was careful to secure the co-operation of the no less high Government official than the Director of the Mints so that his official indorsement of the report would at once attract the attention of the money powers of the world. It was for some other purpose than selling the stock for if the mine was of such unprececeded richness why should he desire to sell the stock?

After the success of his conspiracy he invested millions of dollars in Government bonds and now demands, in common with the big bondholders, that he be paid interest in gold coin, which advances in value as silver declines. Has he ever been a friend of the silver dollar? During the days of the silver output, and when the U. S. Mint in this city was frequently closed for want of silver, James G. Fair shipped day after day tons of silver within two hundred yards of the U. S. Mint in this city and sold it to the Chinese, because he got a trifle more for it. Frequently the Mint was closed for months and a few tons of Fair's silver would have opened it, but he continued to ship past the Mint, preferring to deal with the Chinese than to see citizens of Nevada placed in a position to earn needed wages. Yet today this original demonetizer of silver poses as a friend of the laboring classes and a representative of the people of Nevada whose chief industry has been paralyzed by his nefarious work. During his term of office he has not once lifted his voice for silver; has made no effort to reopen the Mint, and, in fact, is today keeping it closed that more custom may come to his San Francisco silver refinery. This is the man who is held up as the champion of the Democratic party and a representative of the Silver State of Nevada.
